This photo expresses love and the guidance of elders in society. The older sister takes care of her younger sisters and feels responsible for them. The photo demonstrates the concern that the older sister has for the well-being of her sisters. It reminds us of the role that each elder sibling must play in guiding and directing the younger ones. More specifically, it was taken in a school environment to illustrate how often in science we always need guidance, role models, and support to progress.

This image calls on all young people to guide those beneath them and urges authorities to create a conducive environment for guidance in science. This photo also serves as a reminder that girls also have the right to education.
